INDEX OF SUBJECTS

FOREWORD

From a politico-military point of view the SA (the Brownshirts or Nazi Party Stormtroopers) is an organisation which should not be underestimated either at the present time or in relation to an Allied occupation of GERMANY.

Its active wartime strength is in the region of 500,000 to 700,000 men and its regional organisation includes some 17,000 permanent headquarters throughout the Reich. Its total peacetime strength was about 3,000,000 (1934)

In addition there are at least another million SA men now serving in the Wehrmacht who upon demobilisation may resume contact with their old organisation unless it is not only disbanded but completely wiped out.

This organisation represents the most widely spread and densely knit of any of the para-military forces of the Nazi Party and its influence is surpassed only by the SS and the Police. It is significant that the SA is now cooperating closely with both these bodies as an auxiliary internal security and defence force. This development is largely a wartime measure and is one of the principal reasons for the revival of the SA (especially since the appointment of a new Chief of Staff SCHEPMANN in Aug 1943) after the long period of political quiescence that followed the purge of the SA in 1934.

But the SA is not only a part-time para-military organisation. Apart from its responsibility as the principal agency for pre- and post-military training, it provides fully embodied units for frontier and auxiliary police duty equal to regular infantry formations. For comparatively large scale actions against guerillas in L of C areas, some SA units are also issued with light mountain artillery and mortars or are equipped as mounted troops.

These aspects of the SA are discussed in the following sections of this handbook. The general conclusion to be drawn from the evidence is that the SA with its ramified structure and wide range of duties is not only a valuable defence and security organisation on the German home front today, but presents a substantial counter-intelligence problem as a potential source of disturbance and conspiracy during and after the initial stages of the Allied occupation of Germany.

PART I
DEVELOPMENT OF THE SA

1. Origin.

The SA was founded in 1921 as the "Voluntary militant formation of the NSDAP (Nazi Party)". Its members protected the leaders of the Party at political meetings and served as Ordnungsdienst (Order Service) and Saalschutz (Meeting Hall Protective Guard). In addition it was the task of the SA to break up meetings of opposition parties by disorder, heckling and violence.

After 1925, the SS (Schutzstaffel or Protective Detachments) took over the Rednerschutz (Speakers' Protective Service) while the SA "primarily protected the public participating in demonstrations and Party convocations". The Brownshirts also provided military training for Party members at a time when the German Army was limited to 100,000 men in accordance with the Versailles Treaty.

2. Early Aims and Ambitions.

Sociologically the SA recruited itself mainly from the lower middle-classes and strove for realisation of the 25-point Party Programme. Its aims were thus "German Socialism", anti-capitalism ("Brechung der Zinsknechtschaft") and dissolution of estates, department stores and industrial trusts.

Drawing their inspiration from this Party Programme, a document boldly revolutionary in character, the Brownshirted motley, recruited in the main from classes badly hit by the post-armistice economic crisis, naturally leaned to the Left rather than the Right, and emphasised the "Socialism" in National Socialism.

HITLER, always an astute judge of political temperature, was not oblivious to the damage which might ensue from an over boisterous, extremist "private" army, however much it was - and the majority were - dedicated to the rebuilding of a nationalist Germany free from the taint of Versailles and the cancer of a foreign Bolshevism.

Moreover, the Commander-in-Chief of the SA, Captain Ernst RÖHM, was himself no less keen than the least of his raw recruits to shape the SA into a people's army which could one day become, in fact, the new German Army. RÖHM spoke frankly of his ambition for elevating the Storm Troops to the status of an official State Militia, and merging them subsequently with the Reichswehr.

No doubt he even saw himself as a Nazi Party left-wing Minister of War. The Brownshirts, militant exponents of the people's platform, were to exert the decisive influence in affairs of state once the Party was in power.

3. Rise of the rival SS

In 1923 HITLER took two decisive measures to counter a situation which threatened to grow out of hand.

Command of the SA was transferred from RÖHM to his rival GÖRING; and a personal bodyguard was created from among the most reliable SA, first named Stabswache (Headquarters Guard), later joined with another similar body, the Stosstrupp HITLER (Shock Troop "HITLER") to emerge in 1925 as the Schutzstaffeln (Protective Detachments) or SS.

While the SA, at least up to 1934, strove for "ideals and ideological results", the SS was classless in origin and aims, and opportunistic and mercenary in its attitude. It developed into an elite while the SA remained a popular mass movement.

In 1923 RÖHM broke with HITLER and the two factions, the SA and SS, struggled for first place within that Party. It was not until 1932 that the SS was fully emancipated from the irksome control of the SA and was made responsible directly to the Führer.

4. Return of Röhm.

In the meantime, HITLER had begun to reorganise the Party - banned after the disastrous Munich Putsch in November, 1923 - and, in 1926, entrusted the leadership of the SA to Pfeffer von SALOMON who assumed the title of Osaf (Oberster SA Führer or Supreme Storm Troop Commander). (GÖRING at that time was in a Swedish sanatorium for the mentally defective and heavily involved in a domestic scandal).

But Von SALOMON failed to live up to expectations. HITLER, tiring of the endless disputes within the unruly and amorphous mob of the SA finally recalled RÖHM who had gone into voluntary exile in Bolivia as a Military Instructor and in 1931 reappointed him to the command of the SA as Stabschef (Chief of Staff) retaining for himself the title of Osaf.

The HQ of the SA since 1926 has been established in MUNICH and from there RÖHM set to work on his old ambition to transform the SA into a revolutionary army. (Some sections of the HQ were later moved to Berlin where they are still located. By 1933, the SA had become the most popular, and numerically the strongest formation of the Nazi Party.

This power, and RÖHM's ambitions, caused its downfall. The prospect of an SA-dominated Germany was utterly repugnant to the German High Command, the anti-Socialist industrialists and to the SS elite of the Party.

5. The 1934 Purge.

In BERLIN, HITLER, since January 1933 Head of the State, was acutely aware of the smouldering antagonism to RÖHM'S militia; and equally of the need to re-create a powerful professional army, which, combined with a programme of industrial expansion, would restore National Socialist Germany to the front rank of European powers.

The Head of the State was by then a well established dictator who needed less the hearty enthusiasm of "old fighters" than the sympathetic support of the most powerful forces of the land - the army and the industrialists.

There was no call for, nor would be permit, a "Second revolution" and for staunch guardianship of the Party's power within the State he looked rather to HIMMLER and the Sicherheitsdienst (Security Service) of the SS.

RÖHM was not blind to these developments. "Anyone who thinks that the days of the SA are over must make up his mind that we are here and that here we will remain" he declared in August, 1933.

But the inner conflict, the Cataline struggle for place and power in the adolescent Third Reich was too deep-seated and urgent to be resolved by compromise. HITLER, denying some of his earliest henchmen the opportunity of realising their extremist ideals, removed these dangerous elements by a swift stroke. The "Night of the long knives" (30 June 1934) sealed the fate of ROHM and other inconvenient leaders and their acolytes: it also provided extended exercise in wholesale slaughter for HITLER's new SS Leibstandarte acting on the orders of their cold and patient leader, HIMMLER.

6. The Decline in Power of the SA.

Following this purge, which was represented to the public as the liquidation of those guilty of plotting a putsch against the Government, thousands of SA members were weeded out, their weapons confiscated, their political power all but completely abolished. The actual number dropped from 3,000,000 to 1,200,000, this decrease including the removal of the SA Motorstürme (to be reorganised and become the NSKK) and the Frontkämpferbund (War Veterans League).

The SA, its original supremacy in the Party gone, was relegated to a subordinate place. Its functions now consisted mainly of appearances at official occasions "representing the Old Guard", collection campaigns such as the Winterhilfe (Winter Help) and para-military training on a limited scale with inadequate equipment.

The Brownshirt vanished from the daily German street scene, except in purely local parades.

Viktor LUTZE, a colourless and mediocre personality, succeeded RÖHM, retaining the title of Stabschef. Official SA publications explained that the SA-man was "primarily the political soldier" of the Nazi movement.

It was henceforth stressed that the Party itself was to carry on the political leadership while the SA was to be the "instrument of military, spiritual and ideological training and indoctrination", and that "the SA remained as ever the voluntary political militia and guarantor of the National Socialist movement, the National Socialist revolution and the rise of the German Nation".

The SA sank so low that it was considered to a large degree a sports and social club. (The national organ of the Storm Troops "Der SA-Mann" stopped publication in August, 1941, allegedly due to paper-shortage.) The German press openly raised the question whether the Brownshirts still had a task to perform.

As the Party rolls, however, were closed to the public, and as entry into the SA was comparatively easy, many Germans decided to enter the SA for opportunistic reasons. By a decree of January 1939 all German Government officials had to join either the Party or one of its Gliederungen (formations). Many chose the SA. By 1939, membership of the SA, according to an official German statement, had again reached 3,000,000.

It is conceivable that its membership increased so rapidly in spite of the reduced status of the Storm Troops just because the masses of Germany's white-collar lower classes felt that the SA was still the dormant exponent of the original Nazi aims - aims too many of which were rapidly scrapped as the upper clique of the Nazi Party took complete control over all phases of life and economy in the Reich.

7. Functions of the SA after the Purge of 1934.

From this point until the outbreak of war, the importance of the SA was to be military rather than political.

Although HITLER, after the purge, assured the leaders of the Reichswehr that the regular Armed Forces would remain the sole Waffenträger (bearers of arms) in the Third Reich, the value of the SA as a cover for the expansion of the Reich Force was already established.

Thus, before the introduction of compulsory military service in Germany (1934) the Army concentrated on the systematic military training of 200,000 specially selected SA men, in SA uniform.

For the training of OR of the SA during that period, special Lehr-Regimenter (instructional Regts.) were formed at several regular Army centres. Cadres of these units were formed by the Army and men who received their military training in the SA were put through three months training courses in these units.

When military conscription was introduced, members of the SA were called up as ordinary citizens and drafted individually into the various units and branches of the Armed Forces. During their period of military service, their SA membership, as indeed all their political activities were suspended.

In January 1939, when the SA had long since ceased to be a rival force either of the Wehrmacht or the SS, the government decided to utilise the SA organisation for the pre-military training of German youth. This training was to be administered by personnel of the Army and by SA men who had held army rank and were classed as suitable instructors by army authorities.

The III. Btl. of the (XX Danzig) Inf.Rgt.2 consisted at the beginning of the war entirely of SA units which were incorporated into the Wehrmacht in formation.

This sphere of SA activity was, however, narrowed in 1934 by the institution of special military training camps (Wehrertüchtigungslager) for senior Hitler Youth boys under the supervision of the Wehrmacht and staffed by instructors from the Army and the Waffen SS.

8. The SA on the outbreak of war

After the outbreak of war SA men liable to military service were absorbed without distinction into the Armed Forces. Unlike the SS, the SA was not allowed to provide special embodied SA forces to serve in or alongside the regular forces. However, when during the Polish campaign German forces captured the Westerplatte (near Danzig), the Polish naval station of Gdynia (now renamed Gotenhafen) was partly captured by assault boats manned by the Danzig Marine-SA.

The only exception to this rule was the SA Standarte Feldherrnhalle. The origin of this unit is to be found in a full-time embodied company of the SA (Wachbereitschaft) formed in 1935 to act as a guard company for the SA Chief of Staff and as ceremonial troops at SA festivals.

In 1936 it was renamed the SA Standarte Feldherrnhalle (named after the location of the abortive Munich Putsch of 1923) and the following year GÖRING became its commander. It took part in the occupation of Austria but in 1939 the greater part of the Standarte transferred to the Air Force paratroop units.

The remainder was embodied as Feldherrnhalle Bn in 271 Inf Regt.

In 1942 this regiment was formally given the title of Feldherrnhalle and in 1943 when it was incorporated into 60 Mot.Div the title passed to the division itself. (HQ: Berlin W.8.Voss Str.1). Thus the Wehrmacht division Feldherrnhalle is not a full militarised SA division but a professional division which has been given a traditional SA affiliation (See para54).

It is interesting to note that about October 1943 the Oberste SA-Führung sent out questionnaires to members of the SA in the Wehrmacht to gather personal data with the aim of applying for the transfer of these men to the Pz.Gren.Div."Feldherrnhalle". The OKH stated that such applications must be rejected for matters of principle and requested the Oberste SA-Führung to withdraw their questionnaires.

9. Wartime revival of the SA

As the war continued the SA regained some of its lost ground although it never receoverd its political influence. By 1940 the pre-military training programme conducted under SA auspices was in full swing. With the increasing strain on German man-power the SA became more and more important as a training organisation, home guard, auxiliary police and security frontier guard.

The resurrection of the SA began in 1942 although not a great deal of publicity was then given to it in the German press. But when after the death of LUTZE, Wilhelm SCHEPMANN was appointed Chief of Staff (Stabschef) of the SA in August 1943, the situation both inside and outside Germany made it advisable to utilise the SA again to the fullest extent. A two-fold campaign was therefore launched. On the one hand an intensive programme of speeches and press articles endeavoured to raise the prestige of the SA both in the eyes of its own members and of the general public. On the other hand SA units both home and abroad were injected with fresh energy and the maximum amount of war-work placed upon them.

Dr. GOEBBELS' organ "Das Reich" stressed the rejuvenation of the SA by proclaiming that "in the future SA Gruppenführer will co-operate more closely with the Gauleiter, SA Standartenführer more closely with the Kreisleiter, of the Nazi Party".

SCHEPMANN toured the country and among other morale-raising devices announced that a parachute unite of the Luftwaffe, a U-Boat unit, and a Waffen SS formation would be given names commemorating the struggle of the SA and that the personnel of these units would be exclusively recruited from the SA.

Various factors no doubt contributed to this striking revival of the SA. It is clear that the SA of SCHEPMANN and the SA of RÖHM are inspired by very different thoughts and ideals.

The SA cadres today must obviously be regarded as militarily and politically reliable by both HIMMLER and the German High Command. If any tendency towards left wing ideas still lingers on, it is likely to be neutralised by the new course in SA affairs inaugurated by SCHEPMANN.

At the same time the state of Germany makes it imperative to muster the largest possible number of men to assist in maintaining the home front and if necessary prepare for a last ditch fight. Beyond that, it may well be true also that the leaders of Germany, in anticipation of a coming disaster, are desirous of committing all past and present adherents of the Party to the extremist policy established by HIMMLER and the SS. The more Germans irretrievably involved in the present way of life in Germany, the wider and more promising the field for a movement of recovery after a German defeat.

PART II

WARTIME ACTIVITIES OF THE SA

10. Normal Functions

Whatever the long term policy behind the SA revival, the SA today covers an immense field of activity. The following list summarises its importance as a para-military and defence organisation of the Third Reich.

(a) Military Training

Pre-military and post-military training of all adults from 18 to 65, including the deferred.

Organisation of military sports events and competitions in conjunction with all services of the armed forces and all Party formations. (This includes tests for special SA badges for which even Wehrmacht units which have seen front line service are tested by special SA umpires, the regular forces paying a fee "to cover expenses" to the SA).

Beginning in 1943 small SA units have at times been bodily incorporated into the Ersatzheer (Training Army) e.g. the 311th SA-Standarte at Suwalki became the 311th Infantry Depot Bn.

(b) Frontier Control

Service in the VGAD (Verstärkter Grenzaufsichtsdienst or Reinforced Frontier Patrol Service) in cooperation with the customs service of the Finance Ministry and the units of the Grenzpolizei (Frontier Police) which is under the command of the Gestapo.

Supervisory activities over the border population (Grenzbevölkerung) living inside or on the frontiers of Greater Germany.

(c) In Occupied Territory

Auxiliary security and supply duties as occupational force in the Balkans and in the territories adjacent to the Eastern theatre of operations.

Combatting of partisans in these districts by SA units from the border regions, levied locally from among Volksdeutsche ("racial" Germans, e.g. in Slovenia, White Ruthenia etc), and by SA units transferred from the interior of Germany.

Geländedienst (patrolling service) in the zones of communications thus relieving Wehrmacht units of certain security tasks.

In some border regions Volksdeutsche had to serve in the SA before being accepted by the Army.

(d) Security Guards

The guarding of real estate, property and establishments in cooperation with the Werkschutz (Factory Guards) and Ordnungspolizei (Regular Police).

Providing security for bridges and railway installations in cooperation with the SS Bahnschutz und Postchutz, (the SS units protecting transmitters, the Rundfunkhaus in BERLIN and such establishments as transformers and electrical power plants).

The guarding of PW camps, PW transport and the recapture of escapees.

(e) Foreign workers

Supervision of foreign workers in factories, settlements and in transit.

An SA-Sturmbannführer held an important post on the staff of the SS-Verbindungsführer, Caen, which was especially concerned with counter intelligence work pertaining to the locally working O.T. units. (Recapture of deserting forced-labour personnel, surveillance of foreign workers and the issue of their SS identity cards).

(f) Counter intelligence

Propaganda "among the civilian population" and such counter intelligence assistance as the gathering of Allied leaflets.

(g) Traffic Control and Transport

Auxiliary traffic regulation duty in cooperation with the NSKK (National Socialist Motor Corps).

Transport of troops and wounded to and from the front.

(h) ARP etc.

Supervision of evacuations caused by air raids, and construction of shelters and emergency housing centres.

Distribution of food ration cards, control of allotments of coal and supervision of black-out measures.

(i) Medical.

Blood donor services in conjunction with the DRK (Deutsches Rotes Kreuz or German Red Cross).

(j) Provision of SA harvest help units.

(k) The NS-Parteitagspiele (National Socialist Annual Convention Championships) are conducted under SA auspices.

(l) In addition, the SA is known to supplement the fire brigades, ARP forces, auxiliary rural and urban police, and is operating in fields which have been less publicized by the German press: e.g. preparation of Wehrmacht Barracks and bivouac areas, as auxiliary labour units and sanitation personnel.

11. Full-time Service.

It must also be stressed that an increasing number of SA units appear on a full-time basis.

Special permanent SA barracks have been built e.g. in Berlin-Jungfernheide since the beginning of 1943.

SA units serving full-time and quartered in barracks wear regular Wehrmacht uniforms as do SA units employed in the zone of operations or on active duty.

Collar tabs are olive green. SA rank insignia are worn as well as the peaked cap of the regular storm troops.

Units operating in Southern Styria are known to have been on active full-time duty against "guerilla bands" for four months at a time. German photographs show these units with 75 mm mountain field pieces and equipment which appears to be identical with that of the Wehrmacht.

A number of reports also mention SA units in France and the Low Countries which have taken over posts previously garrisoned by units of the SS.

Other special units formed from the SA may be mentioned.

Marsch - und Einsatzstürme (March and Combat Companies) are formed from local SA units stationed on Germany's Eastern and South Eastern borders and appear in field uniforms with packs, rifles and gas masks together with SS-Police fighting "bands and terrorists".

Altsoldatenstürme (Serving Veterans Companies) from among older SA members in Alsace-Lorraine, and in Austria, according to German publications, "represent the German nation's will to maintain order and defend the homeland".

Alarmkompanien (Air Raid Police Auxiliary Companies) have been organised in some parts of the Reich, e.g. in HAMBURG and in Styria.

In the Government General, the SA has set up a Wehrbereitschaftsdienst (Defence Emergency Service) in CRACOW.

Luftschutzstürme (Home Guard ARP Companies) in some German cities have been charged with the "maintenance of order among the civilian population at times of crisis".

12. The main function - Training.

The central, and at the moment, the most important function of the SA is to provide military training for the majority of the various para-military organisations which function in Germany outside, but in collaboration with, the regular Armed Forces.

For this purpose various measures have been taken to strengthen the SA. Selected officers of the SA from different parts of Germany are from time to time given front line experience under the auspices of the Wehrmacht and then brought back to the Reich to command the SA training cadres or the para-military units which receive SA training.

Similarly the Marschabteilungen (units of men still fit for limited service) of the NSKOV (National Socialist League for Disabled Veterans) have been bodily incorporated into the SA.

The various organisations subordinated to the SA for training and organisation are known as Wehrmannschaften (Home Guard or Internal Defence Echelons).

In some Gaue (Districts) of the Nazi Party - each Gau forming a Reichsverteidigungsbezirk or Internal Defence Region - these Wehrmannschaften, again under SA leadership, are combined and termed Gauwehrmannschaften, at the disposal of the Gauleiter (Party District Executive) who simultaneously holds the post of Reichsverteidigungskommissar (RVK or Internal Defence Commissioner).

This aspect of the work of the SA is so comprehensive and important, however, that a special section of this handbook must be devoted to it. (See Part III SA Wehrmannschaften).

PART III

SA-WEHRMANNSCHAFTEN
(Storm Troop Controlled Internal Defence or Home Guard Units).

13. Status of the SA-Wehrmannschaften

By a special decree of 19 January, 1939 the SA was charged with the pre- and post-military training of the entire population. Today this includes with few exceptions all males from 18 to 65.

The SA-Wehrmannschaften are SA-controlled, compulsorily conscripted Home Guard Units composed of ex-members of the Hitler Youth and all those partially disabled but still considered fit and older men not yet called up for Wehrmacht service. The Statthalter (Governor) and Gauleiter of OBERDONAU clearly stated the reasons for this extension of SA responsibilities. In a special proclamation, similar to edicts issued in other parts of the Reich, he explained that the SA and SA-controlled Home Guard formations were to "demonstrate to the field forces that the home front is reliable and make it clear to foreigners that Germany had still on hand sufficient male manpower over and above the Wehrmacht to satisfy all her needs". The same proclamation, like so many Nazi public utterances, especially in recent months, stressed the "difference between 1918 and the present time".

SA-Wehrmannschaften are also organised among Volksdeutsche ("racial" Germans abroad) in such threatened territories beyond the Reich frontiers as White Russia and Croatia. Service in these units is compulsory and documentary evidence proves that members of these auxiliaries have been used in action against guerillas for several months at a time, the entry into their service record reading "Einsatz" (commitment).

The Home Guard is now also referred to as Heimat-SA (Homeland Storm Troop Auxiliary). The terminology is unclear but often refers to SA and SA Wehrmannschaften combined.

14. Functions of the SA-Wehrmannschaften

The SA-Wehrmannschaften proper represent a comprehensive organisation which allocates personnel as required to the following services:-
Heimatflak (Home Guard Anti-Aircraft), Stadtwacht (Auxiliary Urban Police under the Ordnungspolizei or Regular Police), Landwacht (Auxiliary Rural Police also under the Ordnungspolizei or more specifically under its rural branch, the Gendarmerie) etc.

To avoid the same person serving simultaneously in several of these formations, the SA provides the Dachorganisation (Coordinating Agency) for all Wehrpolitische (defence-political) tasks concerning Sicherheit und Innere Verteidigung (Security and Internal Defence) "in which the entire German nation participates," (to quote from a German article) supplementing the regular security forces in order to guarantee the maintenance of the home-front just as the Wehrmacht field forces are guarantors against the external foe".

15. Local Organisation

In some regions of Germany all SA-Wehrmannschaften situated in one Party Gau are termed Gauwehrmannschaften. (See also para 12).

The SA of the Party Gau is responsible to the Reichsverteidigungskommissar (RVK or Internal Defence Commissioner) for "recruitment, formation and training" within the Gau. Gauleiters of the Party in their capacity as RVK's (Reichsverteidigungskommissar) or Reichs Defence Commissioners issue regional orders to SA units through governmental channels to their senior subordinates, the Regierungspräsidenten, concerning the performance of local and regional tasks.

Included in the term Wehrmannschaften is the SA personnel, cadres, instructors and officers which train these Home Guards and all the Wehrmänner (Home Defence Conscripts) drafted into them. The latter are not members of the SA and are not necessarily members of the Nazi Party. They are however all those classed as "Wehrpflichtige des Beurlaubtenstandes" (males carried on the reserve lists of the regular armed forces) excepting only those who have been "attached for special training to such Party formations as the SS., NSKK, NSFK.

They are classified in accordance with their reserve status into groups representing all arms and services. This is done in order to guarantee that local Wehrmannschaften of the SA and units of the Wehrmacht are closely linked.

16. Training in conjunction with the Wehrmacht.

The close link between the Wehrmannschaften of the SA and the army is pointed out clearly in the Heeres-Verordnungsblatt dated 11 Dec 40 in which it is stressed that the courses given by the SA (lasting from 7 to 21 days) are "of definite interest to the Army and that their programme is to be supported to the fullest extent".

SA-Wehr-Ausbilder (SA Instructors) form regular cadres and are on full-time active service. In special training schools 25,000 SA-Wehr-Ausbilder are said to be turned out each year.

SA-Unterführerschulen (NCO schools) are giving special courses for future instructors.

In turn NCOs and officers of the Wehrmacht cooperate in the staging of manoeuvres and a special Wehrstab (Military Staff) partly composed of the regular army is installed with the SA High Command to assist in the direction of the programme.

Similarly Wehrmacht officers are installed with each SA Gruppe. (See also para 27).

Since Autumn 1943, the entire SA (Aktiv I, men aged 18 to 35, and Aktiv II, men aged 35 to 45, as well as the SA-Reserve, men above 45) have been "mobilized in the task of assuring the fighting front of the unbent will of the home front". Men, especially NCOs, of Aktiv I, and Aktiv II, are given special instructors' courses at the:-

Reichsschulen (National Schools e.g. the Reichsnachrichtenschule der SA):

Gruppenschulen (Group Command Schools):

Gruppen-Reiterschulen (Group Command Cavalry Schools) and:

Sonderschulen (Specialist Schools), e.g. the new SA Marine Schule at Hamburg. See Annexe A.

17. Training in conjunction with other services.

Cooperation with the NSKK, NSFK and the police is indicated by the fact that units under exclusive SA training are referred to as Allgemeine Wehrmannschaften (General Purpose Home Guard); those whose training is accomplished with the help of the NSKK are known as Motor-Wehrmannschaften; those which train under SA command but with the assistance of the NSFK are termed Flieger-Wehrmannschaften (Aviation Home Guard); and those whose members are mainly employed in auxiliary police functions are styled Sonder-Wehrmannschaften Special Purpose Home Guard).

The latter train in conjunction with the SA-Sturmbanne z.b.V. (Special Purpose Battalions) of which each SA Group Command has at least one.

SA Marine Mannschaften are specialized Wehrmannschaften which train future and auxiliary naval personnel. They are under the direct supervision of SA naval units and headquarters in cooperation with the Reich navy. (See also para. 19).

While in complete command of the SA-Wehrmannschaften, the SA also enlists the assistance of the following organisations:

Deutsches Rotes Kreuz (German Red Cross),
Alpenverein (Alpine Sports Club),
German Reichspost(Reich Postal Authorities) and Deutscher Skiverein (German Skiing League).

These organisations train specialists under SA supervision. The KdF (Kraft durch Freude or Strength Through Joy) organisation of the German Labour Front also participates in these SA-controlled activities.

18. Training within the SA Framework.

Each SA-Sturm (company of the Storm Troops) trains as many as four to five Wehrstürme (companies of the SA-Wehrmannschaften or Home Guard). One SA-Standarte, supervised the training of 101 Wehrstürme:

Special Wehrbanne (Home Guard Battalions) and even Wehr-Standarten or Wehrmannschaftz-Standarten (Home Guard Regiments) have been formed.

In such border regions as in the Protectorate and the Government General, Kriegswehrmannschaften ("fully trained and prepared home guard units, always ready to control local situations arising especially when on a scale for which ordinary forces are insufficient") have been formed and "equipped for action". In some districts similar units are termed Wehrbereitschaften (Defence Emergency Units).

Technische Lehrstürme (vocational training companies) are attached to some Standarten:

SA-Berufsschulen (professional schools) concern themselves with Umschulung, in other words train working men and craftsmen to switch from their original trade to one especially vital to the German war effort e.g. ship-building.

19. Details of pre-military training

Vorausbildung in den SA-Wehrmannschaften (Preliminary training in the Home Guard) lasts from seven to twenty-one days a year, the final examinations proving in some districts (at least on paper) that the trainee has accumulated a total of three months training.

SA-supervised training includes: grenade-throwing, 25 kilometre full pack forced marches, small calibre rifle markmanship, gas mask hurdle races, first aid, camouflage, night orientation, terrain and movement observation, close order drill and flag signals.

For specialists there are splicing, CW code practice, compass problems on waterways, and simple navigation.

Cavalry basic training, medical field training and sapper and engineer training are also given. These fields are covered by specialised units organised along Army lines.

As early as 1942 a German press report states that within six months 1,000,000 men were given certificates according to which they had received adequate pre-military training. Up to

May 31, 1944, 3,300,000 men had participated in the competitive shooting meets of the SA. 73,000 of them had received special diplomas.

The specialisation and thoroughness of such training is stressed in articles describing the training of medical units for mountain warfare. Special preparation for winter-warfare in Russia is also described. (Bivouac construction, fighting in swampland, protection from cold, care of weapons in the cold, etc.).

That such training has been accelerated and at the same time its level of thoroughness partly decreased is indicated by the fact that the basic morse signal certificate in 1941 required a speed of 60 symbols p.m., while it is now issued for only 40 symbols p.m.

SA-activities include the tasks of securing and training recruits for the German Navy. Schepmann gave Dönitz the public assurance that the SA would regard the training of the right kind of men for the Navy and Merchant Marine as its "permanent task". Men trained in this manner will receive an SA-Naval certificate which will become the basic qualification for enlistment in Navy and Merchant Marine.

Service in the SA-Wehrmannschaften generally involves at least two evenings a week (two hours minimum) and six hours of training on Sundays:

Alpine units, for instance require every year eleven Gebirgsmarsche (forced marches in regions preferably above 1,500 metres, i.e. 4600 feet). Seven of these are to be undertaken in summer and four in the winter. Special ski units are required to take fourteen ski marches lasting one day during each year.

20. Organisation of Sports Competitions.

Up to 1939 a special SA-Sportabzeichen (Sports Badge) was issued by the SA to contestants over 18, and also to non-members upon fulfilment of physical, racial and ideological requirements and after a test in the SA training subjects.

The badge exists in bronze, silver and gold. The silver badge is accorded to men who already hold the bronze badge for five years, having participated throughout that period in repetitive refresher courses and manoeuvres, or those who have reached the age of 35 while continuously participating in SA physical and military activities. The gold badge is given to those already 6 years in possession of the silver badge or having reached the age of 40 while continuously participating in SA athletic and military activities.

By decree of 19 January, 1939, the Sportabzeichen was raised to the status of Wehrabzeichen (Defence Training Badge) and its possession was termed "the basic requirement of all pre- and post-military training". All HJ (Hitler Youth) members who have reached the age of 16 "must henceforth be prepared for the obtaining of the Wehrabzeichen" and all those eligible for military service and aged 17 must obtain it prior to entry into the Armed Services.

Every applicant for the SA-Wehrabzeichen must first obtain the Kriegssanitätsschein (wartime first aid certificate) according to a German press announcement dated July 1944. (In this connection an SA senior officer pointed out the great task of the SA in connection with damage wrought by Allied air raids).

Teams composed of holders of the SA-Wehrabzeichen are called SA-Wehrabzeichen- Gemeinschaften (Communities of Defence Training Badge Holders) and are part of the SA-Wehrmannschaften. (Those badge holders who are members of the SA proper remain in the Storm Troop units).

In 1943 even entire regular Wehrmacht units which had already served on various fronts, took special tests under SA-Prüfern und Lehrscheininhabern (Storm Troop Examiners and Holders of SA Instructor Certificates). Each man had to pass "Physical fitness tests to obtain the Wehrabzeichen".

One case on record shows that the men of an entire Wehrmacht division "upon agreement between the division commander and the commander of the local SA Group Command" were given such tests, minute records being kept by both SA and Army authorities on each entrant.

The SA charged the regular Army authorities a head-tax of RM 2.10 "for expenses" and over 10,000 men passed the examination. (The division, for a protracted period, had participated in severe fighting on the Russian front and had been withdrawn to reconstitute and rest).

In larger cities SA-Standortführer (Local Commanders) organise competitive manoeuvres and wehrathletische Kampftage (defence - athletic contests). The Wehrkampftage (National Meets) take place each year in the autumn and are organised on a nation-wide basis.

During the Winterwehrkämpfe (Winter Competitive Manoeuvres) of the SA-Wehrmannschaften such formations as the Waffen-SS, the Wehrmacht, Reich Labour Service and German Labour Front also participate in the events under SA auspices. Units of the Hitler Youth Wehrertüchtigungslager (WEL or Military Fitness Camps) also send "teams".

21. Recruiting for the SA-Wehrmannschaften

Since the beginning of the war, according to the German press in July, 1943, over 2½ million men have served as Wehrmänner (members of the SA-Wehrmannschaften, literally defencemen). It may be assumed that the accelerated programme conducted since winter 1943/44 has increased that number to at least 3½ million. Two examples may give some idea of the figures:

a. The Gauwehrmannschaft of Oberdonau numbers 24,000 men. (According to the 1939 census, the Reichsgau Oberdonau has a population of 1,034,871.)

b. The SA Wehrmannschaften in Saxony total according to an official German announcement 144,000 men. (The 1939 census lists the total population for that region as 5,231,793).

The prospective members of the Wehrmannschaften are called up in classes, the years 1904, 1905, 1908, 1911, 1912 e.g. having been called in Lower Austria as far back as 1940.

Boys aged 14 and 15 undergo pre-military training in Jugendwehrmannschaften (Youth Home Guard).

One Gau publicly calls upon all males born in the years of 1878 (sic) to 1925 informing them of their imminent service in the Wehrmannschaften of the SA. Those unwilling to comply are threatened with penal action: prison or fines up to RM 150.

Compulsory trainees also include at least in theory all Politische Leiter der NSDAP (Party functionaries from the block- and cell-chief to regional or national executives), and all those serving only part-time in otherwise exempted organisations and formations.

Thus the SA is responsible for the training of part-time members of organisations such as the Regular Police and Gendarmerie and their auxiliaries, even though it exercises no control over these organisations.

The trainees may later be assigned duties with these formations.

the SA, however, allocating them "wherever their services appear to be of greatest value to the Gau-SA-Führung (SA Command within the Party District)".

22. Exemption and Disqualification

The following are exempted from service in the SA-Wehrmannschaften:

Full-time or regular members of:-

a. the Wehrmacht
b. the Waffen SS including the SS Totenkopfverbände (Deaths Head or Concentration Camp Guards).
c. the Allgemeine SS
d. RAD (Reichsarbeitsdienst or State Labour Service)
e. professional fire fighting services
f. Werkschutz or Factory Guard
g. Teno (Technische Nothilfe) Technical Emergency Corps.
h. Postschutz (Mail Security Guard)
i. DRK (Deutsches RotesKreuz) German Red Cross.
j. Hitler Youth (Hitler Jugend)
k. Heimatflak (Home Guard AA)
l. Luftschutz (ARP)
m. technical employees of the mail and communications services if certified as indispensable.

In addition the following are disqualified from service with the Wehrmannschaften:- non-Aryans, invalids and war victims termed "incapacitated 40% or more", clergymen, those having undergone penal servitude or having served prison sentences over two years.

Technical employees of the mail and communication services may be exempted under special provisions in case their Unabkömmlichkeit (indispensability) is attested by their chiefs.

23. Identity Documents.

Special Wehrmannschaftspässe (identification books and personal records) not unlike those of the Army (Wehrpässe) are issued by the SA. These are available to the military authorities at any time.

PART IV

DIE OBERSTE SA FÜHRUNG (The SA High Command)

Diagram on Page C 2, Annexe C, should be consulted.

24. Control of the SA

In peacetime, the SA, like all branches (Gliederungen) of the Nazi Party was virtually an independent organisation. It was not subject to local control, for instance, by the political officials such as the Gauleiter or Kreisleiter although of course the SA as a whole was ultimately subordinated to the Supreme Party Directorate (Reichsleitung der NSDAP).

Wartime necessities have to some extent encroached on this regional and local independence. The first change was apparent in the General Government of Poland. There the Party territorial executives were empowered to issue orders to the SA Commanders within their region.

Subsequently similar provisions have been made in Germany proper. Orders to the Storm Troops may now be issued by the Reichsverteidigungskommissar (RVK or Internal Defence Commissioner).

National tasks are decided as before by the Oberste SA Führung (SA High Command).

It is inevitable, however, in view of the far-reaching activities of the SA that there is close interlocking at all levels with Party, governmental, military and civil defence authorities.

25. The Commander of the SA

The Supreme Commander of the SA (Osaf or Oberster SA Führer) is HITLER.

In practice the real leadership of the SA devolves on the SA Stabschef (Chief of Staff) Wilhelm SCHEPMANN, a member of the Reichstag, formerly Police President of DORTMUND and SA Chief of Saxony and a veteran of the last war.

The SA High Command is located in MUNICH, the "capital of the (Nazi) movement", although several of its bureaux are in BERLIN.

26. The Headquarters Staff

The Stabschef of the SA is assisted by the Adjutant, heading the Adjutantur der SA. A special Abteilung Kultur (Bureau for Cultural Matters) is directly under the supervision of the Adjutant.

Under the Stabschef a Stabsführer (Chief of Staff or Headquarters Commandant) supervises six Abteilungen (bureaux or subsections):

(a) Stabskommandantur (Office of the Chief of Staff and Headquarters Commandant)

(b) Zentral Abteilung (Central Control Bureau of the Headquarters Staff)

(c) Amt Verbindungsstab (Liaison Section)

(d) Abteilung Presse und Propaganda (Bureau of Press Relations and Propaganda).

(e) Juristische Abteilung (Bureau of Legal Affairs)

(f) Abteilung Architektur (Bureau of Construction and Architecture)

27. Departments of the High Command

The SA High Command proper is composed basically of seven Hauptämter (Departments).

(a) Führungshauptamt (Operational Headquarters) which consists of 2 sections:-

- (i) Amt Organisation Einsatz (Organisation and Employment)
- (ii) Amt Körperliche Ertüchtigung (Physical Training) which is in charge of military training and sports.

(b) Personalhauptamt (Personnel Department) with the sections:-

- (i) Gerichtsamt (Jurisdictional Section) which is composed of 2 sub-sections:
  - Disziplinar Gericht (Disciplinary Court)
  - Allgemeine Abteilung (General sub-section)
- (ii) Rechtsamt (Section of Legal Affairs of the Personnel Department)

It is believed that there are two other special offices of the Personnel Dept., namely:

- (iii) Amt Personalien (Personnel records for both the "Aktive", Führerkorps and for z.b.v. Führer) and
- (iv) Amt Soziale Fürsorge (Social Welfare)

(c) Erziehungshauptamt (Department of Education)

Controls the Reichsführerschule and the Führerschulen of the Oberste SA.-Führung and supervises all Gruppenschulen (see para 16)

It is also in charge of ideological and cultural indoctrination and administers the Archiv (Archives) of the SA.

(d) Gesundheitshauptamt (Department of Health) is sub-divided into 2 sections:-

- (i) Amt Ausbildung und Organisation (Training and Organisation) and
- (ii) Amt Gesundheitsführung und Rassenpflege (Health and Eugenics) which is in charge of "Racial and Hereditary Matters".

(e) Hauptamt Kampfspiele (Department of Competitive Sports and Events).

(f) Hauptamt Reichsinspekteur Reit- und Fahrausbildung. (Department of the Reich Inspector for pre-military Cavalry and Horse-drawn Transport Unit Training).

(g) Verwaltungshauptamt (Department of Administration) is subdivided into 2 sections:-

- (i) Amt Verwaltung (Administration) with the following sub-sections:
  - Abtlg. Gesamthaushalt der SA (Central sub-section of budget matters)
  - Abtlg. Hauptreferat Hauptkasse (Chief Treasury)
  - Abtlg. Sachwerte (Estate Office)
  - Abtlg. Verwaltungs-, Organisations-und Zentral Buchführung (Financial Records)
- (ii) Amt Siedlung (Settlement and Housing)

In addition a special Wehrstab (Military Affairs Staff) is linked to the SA Operational HQ. It is primarily concerned with military training and internal defence policy, and includes a body of Wehrmacht officers specially attached to the SA High Command. At lower levels Wehrmacht officers are also attached to SA Group Command HQs. to assist in drawing up military training programmes and supervising manoeuvres and competitions.

28. Personalities

(a) SA-Obergruppenführer Max JÜTTNER

Chef des Führungshauptamtes des SA und Ständiger Stellvertreter des Stabschefs-SA. (Chief of the Operational Headquarters of the Storm Troops and Permanent Deputy of the Acting Commander). A former professional officer in the regular forces, he is also a Member of the Reichstag.

(b) SA-Brigadeführer Thomas JURGENSON

Chief of the Wehrstab.

(c) SA-Brigadeführer Lorenz OHRT

Within the Operational Headquarters is Leiter des Amtes Organisation und Einsatz (Chief of the Section for Staff Organisation and Employment of Forces of the SA-High Command).

(d) SA-Gruppenführer Hans PETERSEN

Chef des Personalhauptamtes in der Obersten SA-Führung (Chief of the Personnel Department of the Storm Troop High Command). A retired Major of the regular army he was a professional soldier prior to his SA activities.

(e) SA-Obergruppenführer Max LUYKEN

Chef des Hauptamtes Erziehung (Chief of the Department of Education). He also holds the post of Inspekteur fur Erziehung und Führerausbildung, Neugauerntum und Volkstumspflege (Inspector of Education, Officers Training, the Advancement of the Reformed Agrarian Settlements Policy and the Furthering of Folk Traditions).

He is also Chef der Führerschule der SA (Chief of the SA Officers School) State Councillor of Prussia and Member of the Reichstag. His background is that of a professional officer, businessman and long-time Nazi Party official.

(f) SA-Obergruppenführer George MAPPES

Heading a Section of the Department of Administration he is Reichskassenwart der SA, (National Treasurer of the Storm Troops). He is a man with commercial background and no military experience.

PART V

SA ORDER OF BATTLE

(For detailed tables of formations and locations see ANNEXE A:
For Organisation Diagrams see Annexe C)

A. REGIONAL ORGANISATION (See Diagram, Annexe C, Page C 1)

29. Greater Germany.

Greater Germany is at present divided into 28 SA Gruppen (Group Commands). The functions of these commands are analogous to those of the ordinary military districts or corps areas (Wehrkreise). As far as the structure of command is concerned, however, the SA Gruppen are more comparable to a divisional organisation.

In size they cover areas which vary from half to the full extent of a Wehrkreis. Their boundaries however do not as a general rule coincide either with those of the Wehrkreise or any other political administrative or paramilitary area although in specific instances there may be partial coincidences.

In so far as any general approximation to other administrative regions is observable it is to the Gaue and Kreise of the Nazi Party local administration. (The Party Gau should not be confused with the Reichsgau which is not a Party but a governmental administrative area, the term being used for those territories annexed since 1938).

Originally the SA territorial structure developed according to the local needs and strength of the Nazi Party. To this day considerable regionalism in SA employment, structure and terminology exists as a result of the purely local character of SA units during the Kampfzeit (Period of Struggle) up to 1933.

After the Nazis had assumed power, the SA territorial commands in some parts of the country were brought more and more into conformity with the Party Gau regions.

A full reorganisation however was never carried out owing to the fact that the whole SA organisation from the Purge in 1934 to the outbreak of war remained politically dormant. Only indeed after the appointment of SCHEPMANN as Chief of Staff in 1943 was there any sign of a reorganisation of the regional structure of the SA.

Today however, a marked tendency is observable to equate SA territorial division with such governmental regions as Regierungsbezirke (Governmental districts of Prussian Provinces or Federal German states), or below that level, with the boundaries of Stadtkreise (Urban sub-districts) and Landkreise.

This usually takes the form of using the nearest convenient administrative boundary (of the Party Gaue, Party Kreise, Regierungsbezirke, Stadtkreise or Landkreise) as the demarcation line for the SA Gruppe. There is however no direct coincidence of area. Thus an SA Gruppe may consist of some three Party Gaue or parts of them.

The HQ of the SA Gruppen are moreover not necessarily located in the same town as the HQ of the nearest Gau or Kreis, or administrative government region, though this separation is partly due to evacuations resulting from Allied air attacks.

30. Occupied Territory.

Beyond the confines of Greater Germany a Befehlsstelle Böhmen-Mähren (Operational Headquarters in the Protectorate) has been installed at PRAGUE. Nevertheless units within the latter territory are frequently controlled by unit headquarters located in Germany proper of annexed regions such as e.g. the Sudetenland. Thus a regimental unit in Moravia, will administratively be part of a brigade in Reichenberg.

A SA-Einheit (Storm Troop Unit Command) has also been established in WARSAW for the Government General. It is believed that the latter has the status and functions of a SA-GRUPPE.

In Eastern occupied countries e.g. in Weissruthenien (White Russia) a Beauftragter der SA (Plenipotentiary of the Storm Troop High Command) has been installed. It is believed that this headquarters controls SA units composed mainly of Volksdeutsche (German colonists) which operate locally in the zone of communications against partisans and as an auxiliary police force.

Similar command posts may well have been established in Western Europe where the SA has taken over from the SS such tasks as border guard, rural patrol and line of communications security; however, these functions have not yet been confirmed.

Already in 1937 five special SA-Brigaden consisting each of three Standarten, were fully trained as Grenzschutz-Einheiten (Frontier Defence Units). They had their home-stations at Elbing, Freiburg, Kaiserslautern, Duren and Vechta/Oldenburg. Each brigade numbered at the time 12,000 men and was equipped with 40 heavy and 20 light lorries, motorcycles and other vehicles. They were independent of regular border forces and were intended as emergency covering units.

31. Border Regions.

In border regions SA-Gruppen control formations which, although bearing distinct names, have been incorporated in the SA proper. These forces were the local Nazi Militia units prior to German occupation. Foremost among them are:

The Schleswigsche Kameradschaft (SK or Slesvig Fellowship League), on the Danish border in Gruppe Nordmark:

The SA-Grenzwacht-Regiment Benda (Frontier Guard Regiment "Benda") in Upper Silesia:

Gruppe Hacker (Group "Hacker") in DANZIG, closely linked with the former SS-Heimwehr-DANZIG (Home Guard DANZIG of the SS):

The Wehrbereitschaftsdienste (Defence Emergency Services) identified in Gruppe Warthe with units in KRAKAU, RADOM, and other formerly Polish cities.

The SA Grenzwach Regiment "Zips" (of SA-Gruppe Sudeten), said to consist of members of that region and reported to have been commited to action "mopping up" partisans in the region and having taken over police supervisionary duties over the entire population of that territory.

The Steirischer Heimatbund (Styrian Home Guard League) on the Slovenian frontiers in SA-Gruppe Südmark.

The Heimatbund, which was founded in 1941, held 2 types of courses in German language for commanders and sub-commanders. Basic and advanced courses were held each lasting for four weeks.

10 alarm coys are being maintained by the Heimatbund. Their purpose is to reinforce local police forces and to occupy vantage points in case of emergency. Membership of the Heimatbund on 1 Apr 1944 amounted to 83,780 men. 122 men died of wounds received in battles with partisans.

A letter dated 26 Apr 44 from the commander of the Wehrmannschaftsstandarte Luttenberg/Untersteiermark to former members of the Standarte now serving with the Armed Forces, states that more than 1000 members of the Standarte have entered the Armed Forces.

The Standarte at present maintains two "Alarm Coys" which have been specially trained at the Führerschule Rohitsch-Sauerbrunn and which have actively taken part in battles against partisans. They suffered several casualties and in revenge shot 25 partisans, who were captured in the course of the fighting. Other activities of the Standarte show the great amount of attention that is being paid to pre-military training and to propaganda.

32. SA Local Headquarters.

Within Germany permanent SA headquarters, staffed by professional executive officers and administrative personnel, are maintained by the Gruppen, by all Brigaden (Brigades) and all Standarten (Regiments). This accounts for at least 965 such headquarters and operational staffs throughout Germany proper.

In addition, each Sturmbann (Battalion) and each Sturm (Company) maintains an "Orderly Room" where files are kept and which are permanently established and listed in German telephone directories. These headquarters of small units are open several hours during the evening, each day of the week, staffed by a part-time "NCO-secretary" and /or a "book-keeper-clerk".

It is certain that not less than 2,500 Sturmbanne (Battalions) and likely considerably more than 14,000 Stürme (Companies) and Sonderstürme (Specialist Companies), or together some 16,500 small units, maintain such command posts often at strategically located premises. If higher permanent staff headquarters of Gruppen, Brigaden and Standarten are added to this number, it may be stated with certainty that not less than 17,350 SA headquarters exist today in the Reich.

Needless to say, all of those are potential document targets and beyond that control points from an occupational counter-intelligence view point. The network of the SA may thus be considered the most ramified or any militarised Nazi Party force, reaching the smallest community and exerting an influence only surpassed by that of the German Police.

As the SA is taking over auxiliary police functions and internal defence tasks to an ever increasing degree, the SA network under highly skilled police and SS leadership must be reckoned with and may well provide one of the major security problems to Allied occupational authorities. A more detailed examination of the various levels of SA regional organisation follows.

B. SA GRUPPEN (Group Commands)

33. Details of the Gruppen (See Diagram, Annexe C, Page C 4)

Each of the twenty-eight Gruppen bears a name. These have various associations with the area in question, for example, geographical (ELBE, DONAU, ALPENLAND, BAYERNWALD), regional (SCHLESIEN, THÜRINGEN) or historical (SÜDMARK, TANNENBERG).

Each SA Gruppe has a peacetime strength of between 50,000 and 100,000 men, depending on the political, economic and sociological factors in the area concerned. As now an average of not less than 75% of the SA are serving in the Wehrmacht the present strength of an SA Gruppe is more likely to vary between 14,000 and 25,000 men.

Each SA-Gruppe operates one or several Gruppenschulen (Training centres) for SA officers and for its specialised units such as signal, naval and engineering echelons.

In addition each SA-Gruppe maintains one or several Hilfswerklager (workshop camps and maintenance centres). SA-Werklager (works camps) are establishments similar to SA-Berufsschulen. They prepare SA members for crafts and trades in the war-essential industries.

The tactical symbol of an SA-Gruppe is a rectangle on its side with an inserted triangle in its left upper diagonal half.

34. Gruppe Headquarters.

The headquarters of each SA-Gruppe (known as SA-Gruppen Führungen) represent the highest regional SA commands and are composed of a permanent professional staff, administratively under the Oberste SA-Führung (SA High Command) at MUNICH, but at the disposal of the Gauleiter (Party political District Chief) in his capacity as Reich Defence Commissioner.

Each such headquarters is headed by a Führer (Commander), assisted by his Stellvertretender Führer (Deputy Commander).

The Stabsführer of each Gruppe is primarily Chief of Staff but frequently takes over the command.

Each Gruppe has a Gruppen-Reiter-Führer (Group Cavalry Commander).

All those posts may be filled by permanent officers, by temporary appointments generally designated m.d.F.b. (mit der Führung beauftragt) or by wartime appointments, styled (Kriegsführer (KF or Commander for the Duration)).

The Gruppen-Führung (Group Command Headquarters) is composed of five departments:

1. Führungsabteilung (Operational Section)
2. Personal-, Gerichts- und Rechtsabteilung (Section for Personnel, Jurisdictional and Legal Matters).
3. Gesundheitsabteilung (Health Section).
4. Zentralabteilung (Central Control Section)
5. Verwaltungsabteilung (Administrative Section).

C. SA-BRIGADEN (Storm Troop Brigades)

35. Details of the Brigaden (See Diagram, Annexe C, Page C 5)

Each SA-Gruppe controls from two to seven SA-Brigaden. Of these one or more may be Jäger-Brigaden (Hunters' Rifle Brigades) or Gebirgs-Brigaden (Mountain Brigades).

Some Gruppen also control a Marine-Brigade (Naval Brigade).

For Sonder-Brigaden (Special Brigades) see E.

Regionally a Brigade generally comprises larger cities, a Regierungsbezirk or about half one in case the region is densely populated.

The manpower of SA brigades varies. Their peacetime strength may range from about 10,000 to 30,000 men, while their wartime strength is estimated to total not less than from 2,000 to 6,000 men.

These figures are, however, estimates which may not be nearly as dependable as similar estimates concerning Gruppen and Standarten. This is mainly due to the fact that much less is known about brigades than about the other echelons, a factor which leads one to believe that some Standarten may not be controlled by Brigaden but directly by Gruppen.

The tactical symbol for SA-Brigaden is an ensign flying to the right, its left border reinforced by a double line, the numerical designation appearing inside the symbol.

36. Designation of Brigaden.

Each Brigade bears an Arabic numeral. Almost 130 have been identified, including at least five SA-Gebirgsjäger-Brigaden or Gebirgs-Brigaden, two Jäger-Brigaden and three Marine-Brigaden.

The numbers accorded to brigades range from 1 to 250 (written e.g., Brig. 89 or Br. 89). The short incomplete series within this range indicate perhaps that the SA never completed a programme of expansion, which was more ambitious than its strength or power would permit either before the Blood Purge in 1934 or after its wartime revival.

Indicative of a partially carried out plan to bring some coordination into the numbering system of SA-Brigaden are the following facts:

Gr. Nordsee contains e.g. Br. 62, Br. 63 and Br. 64 as well as Br. 162 and Br. 163.

Another plan at the beginning of SA organisation seems to have been to give each SA-Gruppe two to four Brigaden. Thus Brigaden 1 to 4 are controlled by Gr. Tannenberg, 11 and 12 by Gr. Hansa, 14, 15 and 16 by Gr. Nordmark, 25 to 30 inclusively by Gr. BERLIN-BRANDENBURG, and 33 to 37 inclusively by Gr. Sachsen.

Above 100 this system of allotment of numbers seems to have been abandoned, and a considerable number of brigades represent upgraded Standarten or regiments which retained their original number designation. This causes considerable irregularity in the numbering of brigades especially above 100.

Some SA-Brigaden are also referred to by regional names. Thus Brig. 250 is also known as Brig. Lothringen. Of others only the name can be identified and no corresponding numerical designation is available as e.g. in the case of Br. Elsass-Nord.

37. Brigade HQ

Brigadestäbe (Brigade Headquarters) are nearly always located in larger urban communities, not infrequently the seats of administrative governmental agencies as e.g., that of the Provincial Oberpräsident (Administrative Chief of a Prussian Province) or that of the Regierungspräsident (Administrative Chief of a Regierungsbezirk).

In conformity with the Gruppen structure, Brigade headquarters are also located in towns where a Party Kreisleitung (Sub-District Headquarters) is situated.

The compositon of Brigade Headquarters is not known but it seems reasonable to assume that they are patterned like Gruppenführungen (Group Command Headquarters).

Each Brigade is commanded by a Führer. Again, as in the case of Gruppen a deputy commander or Stellvertretender Führer assists or may take over the command temporarily (i.V. or in Vertretung).

Wartime appointees are designated KF (Kriegsführer) as throughout the SA.

For details of subunits attached to Brigade HQ. see Section F.

D. SA STANDARTEN (Storm Troop Regts.)

38. Details of the Standarten.

Each SA Brigade controls from three to nine Standarten (The average appears to be four.

Among these is at all times at least on Reiter-Standarte (Cavalry Regiment) which bears the number of the Brigade. In case there are more than one these generally bear the Brigade number plus 100 or 200.

The Standarte (Stand.) or Regiment is the basic strategical Einheit (unit) of the SA formation. Its headquarters is the lowest permanently professionally staffed command post of the SA.

It covers in territory one or several Kreise of the Nazi Party and its boundaries are frequently identical with those of the Landkreise of the Reich administrative organisation.

Thus Standarten headquarters are generally located in the community which is the seat of the Party Kreisleitung (sub-district headquarters) or Party Ortsgruppenleitung (Local unit headquarters), the seat of the Bürgermeister of a town or Landrat (Rural councillor) of a Landkreis, or the seat of both party and governmental administration when party and governmental headquarters coincide. Each Party Kreis is covered by at least one Sturmbann (Battalion) of the local Standarte.

The peacetime strength of SA-Standarten is estimated to have been from 2,000 to well over 4,000 men. As recruiting into the SA among deferred workers, older men, and even those partially disabled has been accelerated, their present strength is estimated to be about 700 to 1,000 men.

Over 800 Standarten have so far been identified and over 850 are believed to exist. (This includes such Sonder-Standarten Special Regiments as Cavalry, Engineer, Mountain and Naval units. See section E below.)

Of the identified Standarten over 550 are SA-Fuss-Standarten (Storm Troop Foot Regiments). This includes Reserve-Standarten and Schützen-Standarten (Sharpshooter Regiments), a distinctive designation conferred upon some of these units.

60 Jäger-Standarten ("Hunters' Rifle Regiments"), and over 50 Gebirgsjäger-Standarten (Mountain Chasseurs), some of them styled as special distinction Gebirgsschützen-Standarten (Alpine Sharpshooters), have been located.

Four Pionier-Standarten (Engineer Regiments) must be considered regular foot regiments which have received specialised training and in the past have performed special tasks on the scale of regimental activity.

About 35 Marine-Standarten (Naval Regiments) are known to exist.

108 SA-Reiter-standarten (Cavalry Regiments) have been identified. Another 20 may be assumed to exist as each SA-Brigade is known to contain at least one such cavalry unit bearing its number. The 20 mentioned units have not been identified but their brigades are known.

The tactical symbol of a Standarte is a square, the sides of which measure about 5/16 of an inch. An anchor above this square indicates a Marine-Standarte, and a small flag similar to the regular Wehrmacht cavalry symbol but not blacked in represents a Reiter-Standarte.

39. Designation of Standarten.

Standarten bear Arabic numerals and are numbered from 1 to 601, as many as eight bearing the identical number. In order that they may be distinguished, their Standort (HQ location) is indicated in brackets following the number, e.g. 1 (MÜNCHEN); or the Gruppe to which a Standarte belongs may be appended.

Some of these regiments bear, in addition to their number the name of an "old fighter" or a "martyr of the movement", especially from the SA itself, e.g. "Fritz TODT". These names are honorary and are conferred upon selected units, mostly those of which the "martyr" was a member prior to his death or those of the town in which he was active, (e.g. "Horst WESSEL", "Peter DONNHAUSER").

At times Standarten are informally given geographic names such as "Enzgau", "Esch", "Unterelbe" or "Main". Those covering the regions surrounding a larger town or city are frequently indicated as follows: "Nürnberg-Land". Those covering a city area are similarly referred to, e.g. "KÖLN-Stadt" (COLOGNE City).

Up to 260 most numerals appear to have been used up and duplicated in numbering SA-Standarten. In complete and broken series above 260 show no such duplication in numbers.

Considerable confusion in the numbering system of SA-Standarten is caused by the fact that many Standarten have the same number (eight Standarten bear the number 1). This is the result of local independent development at the time of their inception.

Many SA units were originally given the numbers of "Traditions regimenter der Vorkriegsarmee" (Traditional Regiments of the former Imperial Army). These SA-Standarten, especially during the late twenties and early thirties, were then termed Traditionsträger (units perpetuating the tradition).

In the Imperial German Army, a Royal Bavarian Infantry Regiment, a Royal Prussian Füsilier Regiment, a Grand-Ducal Hessian Grenadier Regiment could all hear the same number, as each of them belonged, at least theoretically, in peacetime, to an army of one of the federated German kingdoms and principalities which formed the empire.

Thus, SA-Standarten bearing the identical number appeared in distant, or even in nearby towns and regions.

Furthermore, during the twenties semi-isolated and partly autonomous sections of the Nazi Party proceeded to number their SA units either consecutively from 1 upward or in accordance with provisional attempts to organize the SA numbering system in various series.

In spite of this, a certain amount of serialization among SA-Standarten is discernible, even though such series are invariably short, irregular and incomplete.

SA-Gruppe BERLIN-BRANDENBURG e.g. contains SA-Standarten numbered through from 1 to 10 as well as Standarte 12.

The one missing unit, namely Standarte 11, may quite possibly exist although it has not yet been identified. It also may have existed at one time but could have later been merged with one or several of the units now known to exist.

In Brigade 81 (REGENSBURG) three identified Standarten, one regular, one naval and one cavalry, all bear the number 11.

The greatest repetition of identical numbers, often for more than five Standarten, stationed in widely separated or in nearby territories, exists below the number 30.

In other words, below this number are most of those Standarten which are either among the Urstandarten (original units, some of them dating back to 1923) or among the Traditionsträger, those "bearing and continuing the tradition of historical regiments".

E. SONDER-STANDARTEN (Specialist Regiments)

40. SA-Gebirgsjäger-Standarten (Storm Troop Mountain Chasseur Regiments)

Foot Regiments from the Alpine regions are mostly mountain units. For brevity they are also referred to as Gebirgs-Standarten (Mountain Regiments).

They are numbered consecutively from 1 upward and are given the prefix GJ e.g., GJ4.

Their Sturmbanne and Stürme (Battalions and Companies) are written as follows: I./GJ 4 and 11./GJ4 respectively. The series is almost complete up to 27 as far as can be determined. In no case have numbers of Mountain Regiments been duplicated as have those of ordinary Standarten of the SA. A number of Standarten belonging to Gruppe Südmark have been styled Gebirgsschützen-Standarten (Alpine Sharpshooter Regiments) and are designated GS.

GJ and GS Standarten form special Gebirgsjäger-Brigaden (Mountain Chasseur Brigades); for brevity also referred to as Gebirgs-Brigaden (Mountain Brigades). These are stationed exclusively in the area of the following SA-Gruppen: Alpenland, Hochland, Südmark and Donau.

Already in 1938, a reliable report stated that the GJ Standarten 1, 2 and 3 could be easily transformed into regular army mountain units, needing but adequate artillery elements to render them tactically independent.

The Standarten GJ 95, GJ 96, GJ 97 and GJ 99 bear the same numbers as Gebirgs-Brigaden (Mountain Brigades) with identical HQ locations. It is not certain whether these units have been upgraded from Standarten to Brigaden or whether these Standarten are component units of Brigaden bearing the same numbers and located in the same towns. The German press as recently as spring 1944 continued to style units bearing these numbers sometimes as Standarten and at other times as Brigaden.

A certain amount of confusion is caused by the fact that GJ units are frequently referred to as GS units and vice versa (See also next para.). Such improper designations may be found in the German press as well as in documents. Quite often the qualifying prefixes GJ and GS are omitted.

In such cases, however, the Standort (HQ location) appearing in parenthesis after the numeral will often provide the clue to its identity. Thus a Standarte 2 (Imst) should obviously, have been written GJ 2 (Imst) as Imst in Tyrol is virtually surrounded by snow-covered peaks and the entire region is covered by GJ units rather than regular Standarten.

On the other hand there exists some doubt as to whether Standarte 73 (WAIDHOFEN) is identical with GJ 73 (WAIDHOFEN) as that town in the YBBS Valley is situated rather in the foothills than in Alpine regions.

41. SA-Jäger Standarten (Storm Troop Hunters' Rifle Regiments)

These regiments are mainly composed of professional foresters, game wardens, keepers of preserves, sportsmen, members of rifle clubs, hunting societies and others owning firearms.

Jäger-Standarten are mostly located in such regions as those covered by SA-Gruppe TANNENBERG (East Prussia's hunting grounds), Gruppe BAYERNWALD (forest lands of the Upper Palatinate) or Gruppe Sudeten (Ore Mountain Regions).

Jäger-Standarten bear the prefix J, e.g., J 3. Gebirgsjäger-(GJ) Standarten and Jäger (J) Standarten are often confused by the Germans themselves. The location, however, generally gives the clue to the unit.

Jäger-Standarten are numbered more or less consecutively from 1 upward, 142 being the highest definitely identified unit. Duplication in numerals is not infrequent.

Up to 29 all numbers have been filled with at least one J Standarte.

As a result of the use of the same numbers for different Standarten, no less than five J 2 units have been identified, located in such distant regions as Franconia, Pomerania, East Prussia, the Spreewald near BERLIN and the Sudetenland.

One J Brigade identified is entirely composed of J Standarten and one R Standarte. Sub-units of J Standarten are written in the same manner as those of GJ Standarten e.g., I./J 2 or 12./J 2.

42. SA- Reiter-Standarten (Storm Troop Cavalry Regiments)

Normally at least one, sometimes two or three mounted units of regimental size are included in each SA-Brigade. 101 Reiterstandarten were reported already in 1938 and a subsequent German report stated that the Wehrmacht had received each year 50,000 men who had been members of the SA cavalry.

They bear the numbers of the brigades to which they belong and in case more than one such unit has been assigned to one brigade, 100 or 200 is added to the brigade number. Thus, Reiter-Standarte 89, 189 and 289 belong to SA-Brigade 89 or SA-Gruppe DONAU.

Reiter-Standarten are either written e.g., Reiter 89 or abbreviated R 89. The latter abbreviation, however, is mainly used for Reserve-Standarten (Second Line Regiments composed of older men) which, however, are also designated Res e.g., Res. 463.

The tables in Annexe A designate cavalry units as R and reserve units as Res.

43. SA-Marine-Standarten (Storm Troop Naval Regiments)

Each SA-Gruppe contains normally at least one Marine-Standarte. Some of these are controlled by Marine-Brigaden which in turn come under SA-Gruppen.

Their identifying numbers run consecutively from 1 upward, 401 being the highest identification so far.

Headquarters of Marine-Standarten are not only located in seaports but also in inland towns situated on more or less navigable streams and waterways. Some are even located in such towns as PRAGUE and STUTTGART which are situated on rivers which are commercially insignificant. The sub-units of Marine-Standarten are frequently widely dispersed within the area covered by the SA-Gruppe to which the Standarte belongs.

Naval SA Standarten are often distinguished by the letter M preceding the numerical designation of the unit. This, however, leads to frequent misinterpretation, as M means also Motor and is used in this sense both in connection with SS and SA, and NSKK transport and motorised units.

For the sake of brevity the Order of Battle (Annexe A) abbreviates Marine-Standarten with M.

Sub-units are designated as in the case of GJ small units: e.g., I/M 3 or 13./M 4. Marine-Brigaden are generally styled M Br. or M Brig.

44. SA-Pionier-Standarten (Storm Troop Engineer Regiments)

Four such units of regimental strength have so far been identified. They bear the numbers 5, 10, 43 and 47. The first mentioned is a Gebirgspionier-Standarte (Geb.Pi.5).

Pionier-Standarten are indicated by the prefix Pi.

Pi 10 is known to have done considerable construction jobs in the bog lands along the river EMS and bears the honorary name "EMSLAND".

Pi.43 may well be identical with the regular Standarte of that number although it is repeatedly termed an engineer regiment. It is of interest that its commander also controls two other Standarten and one cavalry regiment.

F. ORGANISATION BELOW REGIMENTAL LEVEL

45. Components of the Standarte.

Each SA Standarte is composed of 3 to 6 (generally 4) Sturmbanne (bns), abbreviated "Stuba". Only Reiter Standarten are directly divided into Stürme (troops, = coys.)

Sturmbanne are given Roman numerals from I upward within each Standarte. Thus the second bn of Standarte 52 is II/52.

The third or fourth Sturmbann may be a regimental Pionier-Sturmbann (Engineer Bn), of three or four Pionier Stürme and one or two Reserve-Pionier-Stürme.

The fourth, fifth or sixth Stuba may be a Reserve Sturmbanne. Some Standarten may contain a Nachrichten Sturmbann (see next para).

Each Standarte has generally one or two Nachrichten-Stürme (Na.St. sigs coys) and one Sanitätssturm (Sa.St.Med Coy). These invariably bear the number of the Standarte, without regard to the Sturmbann to which they will normally be assigned for organisation purposes.

If the Standarte contains only one Pionier Sturm (Pi St), this unit will also bear the Standarte number, although assigned to a Sturmbann.

Thus Stand 55 will contain Na 55, Sa 55 and Pi 55.

(Note: Pi 55 may also be written Pi St.55 to avoid the impression that the unit is a Pionier Standarte, though there are few of these.)

If, as noted above, Stand 55 contained an entire Pionier-Sturmbann, this will be written Pi II/55; its Stürme will generally be numbered from 1 upward and are written Pi 1/55, Pi 2/55, etc.

Some Standarten are also believed to contain MT units known either as Motor-Stürme (M.St) or Kraftfahr-Stürme (K.St), bearing the number of the Standarte.

(Note: Brig 21 (SCHLESIEN) contains a Motor Standarte.)

46. Details of the Sturmbann

Each Sturmbann maintains a permanent HQ which transacts business for the unit during the evening hours of the day, usually throughout the week, and is often open all Saturday and Sunday. The clerical personnel of this headquarters is usually considered semi-professional and frequently draws part-time wages. It is composed of senior time-expired NCOs. Responsible for the unit and its headquarters is the Führer (Commander of the unit), the Kriegsführer (KF; wartime commander) or a temporarily appointed Stellvertreter (deputy).

Each SA Sturmbann is mainly composed of three to ten (in wartime the average is believed to be five) Stürme, or companies.

The 3 to 10 Stürme (Companies) of each Sturmbann are given Arabic numbers in the following manner: all Sturme of Sturmbann I, of a given Standarte bear consecutive numbers from 1 to 10, those of Sturmbann II from 11 to 20, those of Sturmbann III from 21 to 30, etc.

Thus 52/143 defines Sturm 52 of Standarte 143 (52nd company, 143rd regiment), automatically indicating that Stand. 143 comprises the exceptionally high number of six Stubas as Sturm 52 (series 51 to 60) belongs to a 6th battalion. The unit may also be written 52/VI (where the regimental unit may be assumed) or 52/VI/143.

Thus such high company numerals as 52 do not indicate that the Standarte comprises actually 52 Stürme. The system merely provides for expansion and permits local reorganisation of small echelons below regimental level.

In reality Stuba I may only comprise four Stürme, namely 1/143, 2/143, 3/143 and 4/143; Stuba II, e.g. three, say St.11, St 12 and St 13; Stuba III e.g. five, namely 21/III, 22/III, 23/III, 24/III and 25/III etc. (The above example shows also the various manners in which such sub-units are usually expressed in abbreviated form).

In addition to its regular Stürme, each Sturmbann contains at least one, often two and at times three or four, Reserve-Stürme (Auxiliary Second Line Companies).

These are numbered with the same numerals as the regular Stürme of the Sturmbann, thus duplicating the latter's lowest sub-units; however, a R or Res precedes the numbers of the Reserve-Stürme.

In this manner, a Stuba III, comprising St 21, St 22, St 23, St 24 and St 25 may contain also R St 21 and R St 22.

If these units are all components of Stand.44, the Reserve-Stürme mentioned above may also be written R 21/44 and R 22/44.

(At this point it should again be noted that the letter R is also used to designate Reiter- units while the abbreviation Res. is also encountered to designate Reserve formations. The Order of Battle, Annexe A, uses R for Reiter units and Res for Reserve units).

In some cases one or two Stürme or Reserve-Stürme may have ceased to exist, having been merged with other units of company level, e.g. St 11, 12, 13 and 15 and Res St 11 and Res St 13 will make up one Sturmbann. In such a case St 14 and Res St 12 existed probably at one time but are no longer in existence now.

Beyond these mentioned sub-units, each Storm Troop Battalion may have one or possibly two of the following organic units:-

A Musikzug or Spielzug (SZ) (Military Band).
One or two Nachrichten-Stürme (Signal Companies).
One or two Pionier-Stürme (Engineer Companies) or A Sanitäts-Sturm (Medical Detachment).

Usually the first Sturmbann of a Standarte contains the band, a second one or two Signal Companies, the third an engineer company and the fourth the medical detachment.

Nachrichten Sturmbanne also exist, sometimes as part of a Standarte or Brigade, sometimes as an independent unit, under the SA Gruppe. Some Nachrichten Sturmbanne are organised into one Semaphore Coy and one Funksturm (morse and heliograph coy) and one Fernsprechsturm (telephone coy).

The tactical symbol of a Sturmbann is an equilateral triangle, the Roman numeral of the unit appearing in its centre.

47. Units below the Sturmbann

Each Sturm is divided into 3 to 4 Trupps (Platoons). Each Trupp contains from 3 to 4 Scharen (Sections or Squads). In peacetime one Schar was composed of 8 to 16 men. The number of Scharen having been reduced in each Trupp (and the number of Trupps reduced in each Sturm) the average Schar may still have 6 to 8 men and one Trupp 18 to 30 men.

Trupps and Scharen have no headquarters, the Sturm being the lowest unit with a permanent HQ.

The latter is generally open several hours each evening and all day Saturday and Sunday and manned by a part-time professional NCO who performs the duties of a charge-of-quarters, bookkeeper, correspondent and filing clerk.

The tactical symbol of a Sturm is a square measuring about one quarter of an inch on each side, the numeral appearing in its centre.

Reiter-Stürme bear a small white flag above the square.

Pionier-Stürme are indicated by crossed shovel and pickaxe in the centre, the numeral appearing on the left side of the square.

Nachrichten-Stürme are indicated by a lightning flash inside the square, the numeral again appearing on the left side of the symbol.

SA headquarters below the Sturmbann frequently indicate Trupps by Roman and Scharen by Arabic numerals. Thus I/12/153 is the first platoon of the 12th company of the 153rd Regiment. The second section or squad of that unit would read 2/I/12/153.

The Standarte designation is frequently omitted where documents or correspondence concern only lower echelons belonging to the same regimental unit. Thus the above units when written in correspondence concerning only the Sturm or Sturmbann will read: Tr I/12 or Sch 2/I/12.

The abbreviations Tr for Trupp and Sch for Schar may even be left out in such cases when the writer or NCO making an entry into a record may assume that the recipient knows that I/12 refers to the first Trupp of Sturm 12 rather than to the first Sturmbann of Standarte 12.

Note:-

A Standarte with HQ location in a comparatively small town, may well have one of its Stürme or even Sturmbanne stationed in a nearby city. Thus Standarte 247 (ESSLINGEN) has 26/247 located at STUTTGART. This causes some overlapping jurisdiction and territorial confusion.

G. SONDER-EINHEITEN (Specialist Units)

48. Training of Specialist Units

All signal, medical, engineer, cavalry and mountain units are termed Sondereinheiten. The organisation of such units has been discussed above (Section B-F).

Special training centres are maintained for these specialist units. At these prospective examiners are trained who after passing out are entitled to test members of their units and to issue the appropriate certificate. Each unit issues a special certificate for those having attained required standarts.

(a) The SA-Nachrichtenschein (Signals certificate)
Qualifications: 12 five-letter groups morse-code per minute (60 letters, later dropped to 40 letters), reading of code and ear-reading of code. Holders of certificate wear a special badge on the left forearm of their brown shirt (a red flash of lightning).

(b) The SA-Sanitätsschein (Medical or first aid certificate) is a pre-requisite for obtaining the SA-Wehrabzeichen (see para 20).
A certificate, styled SA-Kriegs-Sanitätsschein is also known to exist and may be identical with the medical certificate.

(c) The SA Pionierschein (Engineer certificate)

(d) The SA-Reiterschein (Cavalry certificate)
This diploma when obtained in the year of entry into the regular forces guarantees, in the case of voluntary entry into the Wehrmacht, choice of arm or branch of service and in the case of conscription, preference for mounted or horse-drawn units.
13,200 Reiterscheine are reported to have been issued as early as 1941. Issue is believed to have been greatly increased since.

(e) The SA-Marineschein (Naval Certificate) is the basic qualification for entry into the German Navy and Merchant Marine. (See para 19).

(f) The SA-Bergabzeichen (Mountain-badge)
It is worn on the left sleeve below the elbow. Only men who have already qualified for the SA-Wehrabzeichen may obtain the mountain-badge. This badge is issued in green, in silver and to those who already own the silver badge for ten years, in gold.

In the border regions of Styria, the Warthegau, the Ostland and the Protectorate, the word Einsatz-Stürme indicates companies which perform military service, engaging partisans and guarding lines of communications. Their service may last uninterruptedly for several months.

53. SA Verfügungstruppe

An SA-Verfügungstruppe (Special Disposal Troop) has also been identified. Its exact task is not known but the name recalls the SS-Verfügungstruppe, immediate forerunners of the present divisions of the Waffen-SS.

The SA-Verfügungstruppe was originally formed in 1933. As the Versailles Treaty permitted the arming of postal and railway security personnel, they were attached and partly incorporated into the Bahnschutz and Postschutz now both SS formations.

Since 1944 SA units are again doing auxiliary duty for the postal and railway security forces in Germany proper and in the zones of communications.

54. The SA-Standarte "Feldherrnhalle"

Another professional elite formation of the Storm Troops is the SA-Standarte "Feldherrnhalle". Originally it consisted of six Sturmbanne which maintained permanent barracks and depots at BERLIN, MUNICH, HATTINGEN, KREFELD, STETTIN and STUTTGART.

It now maintains one Sturmbann at the headquarters of each SA-Gruppe. These battalions supply replacements to the Ersatz (depot) units of the Pz Gren Div "Feldherrnhalle", a regular formation of the Wehrmacht, formerly known as 60th Div (mot) (see para 8).

In January 1937 GÖRING, in his capacity as SA-Obergruppenführer, was appointed Chef (Commander) of Standarte "Feldherrnhalle". As commander of this elite SA formation he is directly responsible to the Stabschef (SCHEPMANN), and does not come under the control of any single SA-Gruppe.

The special mission of SA-Standarte "Feldherrnhalle" is the guarding of Nazi Party offices, especially in MUNICH and BERLIN. It is also officially stated that its sub-units are "at all times ready to be committed to action". As an elite force, this Standarte also supplies well-trained officers for other SA-units.

Service in SA-Standarte "Feldherrnhalle" requires previous service of six months with another SA unit or one year's membership in the Hitler Youth organisation. Enlistments are for three year periods which may be extended another three years, etc. Service in the SA-Standarte "Feldherrnhalle" counts as Wehrdienst (military service).

Members of the SA-Standarte "Feldherrnhalle" wear brown Storm Troop uniforms, with two shoulder straps (Party formations wear one only). In addition they wear the Luftwaffe version of the Hoheitsabzeichen (National Insignia) and on parades a breast plate showing the German Eagle and Swastika.

On manoeuvres they are clad in uniforms like those of the Luftwaffe. Members of this unit wear at all times an armlet giving the name of their unit on the left cuff.

NOTE : The German use of the title "Feldherrnhalle" may lead to some confusion.

The SA Standarte "Feldherrnhalle" should be clearly distinguished from the Wehrmacht Pz. Gren. Div. "Feldherrnhalle" and its sub-units (120 Füsilier Regt, 271 Grenadier regiment, artillery regiment, sigs. bn, engineer bn. and anti tank bn) all of which carry the title "Feldherrnhalle"

Yet another unit to be distinguished is the Fallschirmjäger regiment (Parachute Regt) "Feldherrnhalle", which shares a Wehrmeldeamt (recruiting office) at POTSDAM with the Pz. Gren. Div. "Feldherrnhalle", but is believed to come under command of the Luftwaffe.

Both the parachute regt. and the Pz Gren Div "accept volunteers from all parts of Germany".

PART VI

* SA general officers wear insignia on right and left collar patches.

Ranks listed above from 1 - 4 inclusive are termed SA-Mannschaften (other ranks); from 5 - 9 SA-Unterführer (NCOs), from 10 - 12 Untere Führer (Lower Commanders), from 13 - 15 Mittlere Führer (Intermediate Commanders) and from 16 upward Höhere Führer (Superior Commanders).

56. SA Officers

The Führerkorps der SA (Officers' Corps) is organised into:-
SA-Führerkorps (Regular Officers)
SA-Verwaltungs führerkorps (Corps of Administrative Officers) and SA-Sanitätsführerkorps (Medical Officers Corps)

SA-Ärzte (Medical Officers), SA-Apotheker (Pharmacists) and SA-Zahnärzte (Dentists) are allotted to HQ and units as follows:

	Ärzte	Apotheker	Zahnärzte
Gruppenstab	3	1	-
Brigade	2	-	-
Standarte	2	1	1
Sturmbann	3 (or more)	-	1
San. Sturm	5	2	2
San. Trupp (minimum)	2	2	2

The SA-Führerkorps divides into aktive Führer (active officers) and z. V. Führer (zur Verfügung or special disposal officers). The former are those filling a planmässige Dienststelle (post provided by the W.E. or T/O) while the latter are those who could not be posted to regular units or headquarters because of their professional, governmental or Party activities.

Furthermore, SA-Führer (Storm Troop Officers) may be termed Ehrenamtlich (holding the rank as a special honour, without pay)
Nebenamtlich (part-time) and Hauptamtlich (full-time and professionally).

According to a 1944 OKH memorandum concerning officer replacements members of the SA from Stürmführer upward, like officers of all other para-military formations, who are at present serving with the Armed Forces, will be given the opportunity to become officer-cadets. To this end they will be exclusively employed in the front line and with the Field Army. Their CO's will submit reports at regular intervals stating whether in their opinion these men have the qualifications for officer-cadets and whether they can be recommended for participation in an officer-cadet training course.

In case these men do not appear to have the necessary qualifications for an officer-cadet or an officer, the reports must give precise reasons in detail, so that the OKH/Personnel Office and the Oberste Sa-Führung Berlin W 8, Vossstr. 2, can be kept informed accordingly.

57. SA Personnel

Members of the SA, who have been detailed for duty with the OT, can only be given those ranks which are in accordance with their actual field of activities. These ranks will very often be lower than their former corresponding SA-ranks. In all such cases detailed reports with reasons for the lowering in rank will be submitted to the personnel office of the OT, which in turn will keep the Oberste SA-Führung informed accordingly.

For the same reason the personnel office of the OT must be kept informed if disciplinary action is being taken against members of the OT, who are also members of the SA.

All SA personnel are divided into the categories
Aktiv I (men aged 18 to 35),
Aktiv II (35 to 45) and
SA-Reserve (those above 45).

58. Uniforms

The Storm Troops wear the traditional brown shirt, brown breeches and black boots. The uniform is protected by German law. They may also wear a brown tunic over the brown shirt. The tie is of the same colour as the uniform. A shoulder strap is worn on the right side only.

The cap may be the dark brown Dienstmütze (service cap) not unlike a Norwegian skiing cap, or the Lagermütze (fatigue cap) which is similar to a British forage cap and is brown with an SA triangular badge on the left side.

All members of the SA wear Sam Browne belts and the SA-Dolch (dagger), as well as a red arm band on the left arm showing the swastika in a white circular field.

In March, 1944, the Stabschef of the SA, Schepmann, came to an agreement with the Organisation Todt that officers of the SA at present serving with the OT will wear the uniform of the OT with an SA-badge, form and details of which will be announced later. Accordingly, all SA-officers with the OT were ordered to wear OT uniform, and were prohibited to wear the insignia of their respective SA-rank.

The Marine-SA (Naval Storm Troops)wear a navy blue uniform, breeches, black boots and a flat cap similar to the regulation cap of the German Navy. The shirt and tie are brown. The Sam Browne belt worn with this uniform (outside the overcoat in case the latter is worn) is black. The cap shows the SA insignia in gold, entwined by a golden wreath below the Hoheitsabzeichen. In other respects uniform regulations as given for the SA apply in general to the Marine-SA as well.

Members of the SA-Gruppen Hochland, Alpenland and Südmark are privileged to wear Tyrolean leather shorts and white stockings up to the knee, leaving the knees bare.

59. Unit Identifications: SA Gruppen Colours

The men and units of each SA Gruppe may be identified by the distinctive colour of the collar patches, which coincide at all times with the colour of the top of the crown on the cap.

A special colour scheme for each SA-Gruppe is also provided for the cap and collar piping. This scheme, however, is rather intricate, and as much as the piping does not show clearly at a distance of several paces and may be unrecognisable on an old uniform, this minute means of identification may be disregarded.

In addition each SA Gruppe is accorded a specific metallic colour for its buttons and insignia of rank and for the numerals appearing on the collar patches.

The following table gives the identifying colour scheme for each SA Gruppe and for units and staffs following the system. In brackets is the official abbreviation for each Gruppe.

SA-GRUPPE (Abbreviation)	Collar Patch and Top of Cap	Numerals on Collar Patch	Button and Rank Insignia

60. Other Unit Identifications

(a) Collar patches.

Up to and inclusive SA-Obersturmbannführer, storm troopers wear their rank designation on the left collar patch and their unit designation on the right. The following are examples of the manner in which the unit designation appears on the right collar patch:

32/L Sturm 32 of the SA-Leibstandarte (MUNICH)
33/1 Sturm 33, Standarte 1
1/J15 Sturm 1, Jäger-Standarte 15 (STRAUBING)
R1/86 Reserve-Sturm 1, Standarte 86
IV/8 Sturmbann IV, Standarte 8

Officers from Standartenführer upward wear on the right collar patch, below the oak leaf insignia indicating their rank, the following unit identifications:-

An Arabic numeral:	Number of the Standarte which they command.
An abbreviation, such as Br.56:	Indicating the brigade which they command.
The abbreviation of a SA-Gruppe:	Indicating the Group Command of which they are in command.
No special insignia below oak leaves:	Indicating that they are not commanders but designating according to colour scheme that they serve on the staffs of SA-Gruppen or the Oberste SA-Führung. (See list in previous paragraph)

(b) Shoulder straps.

The shoulder straps of the SA are worn on the right shoulder only up to the rank of SA-Obersturmbannführer, and they are not unlike those of the Wehrmacht Leutnant although somewhat narrower.

From SA-Mann up to and inclusive of the rank of SA-Obertruppführer they carry the collar patch colours of the SA-Gruppe with which the man serves.

From Sturmführer to Hauptsturmführer they are in aluminium or gold, depending on the colour scheme of buttons and rank insignia of each SA-Gruppe, the protruding base of the shoulder strap showing the collar patch colour of the Gruppe.

Sturmbannführer, Obersturmbannführer and Standartenführer wear a shoulder strap not unlike that of a German Major, the collar patch colour of their Gruppe again protruding from under the braid.

From Oberführer upward, SA officers wear a shoulder strap similar to that of a General officer in the German Army.

61. Insignia of Appointment, Arm of Service etc.

Commanders of Standarten (regardless of rank) and officers from Standartenführer upward wear aluminium braid on their caps, between the brown base and the coloured top or crown.

Adjutants may be recognised by a brown Aiguillette embroidered with silver thread. SA-Adjutanten des Führers wear a gold aiguillette, those serving on the staffs of a Reichsleiter (Member of the National Nazi Party Directorate), a Cabinet Minister, or Reichsstatthalter (governor) wear aiguillettes in silver. The 1. Adjutant of the Stabschef wears aiguillettes in silver and all other adjutants serving in his headquarters in dull aluminium.

Verwaltungsführer (Administrative Officers) wear the regular insignia of their rank with a wide blue ribbon around their collar patch.

Sanitätsführer (Medical Officers) and all medical personnel wear a red Lebensrune on the left lower arm; SA-Ärzte (physicians) wear the identical insignia in white on an oval brown patch; SA-Apotheker (Pharmacists) the white insignia on a triangular brown patch; dentists, on a rectangular patch; and veterinary surgeons on a triangular patch pointing downwards. Crossed flags on lances preceding a numeral on the right collar patch indicate a cavalry unit.

Shovel and pickaxe crossed indicate an engineer unit.

A downward pointing flash of lightning a signal unit, an anchor a naval unit; a lyre a band unit. SA medical personnel wear a Lebensrune (Life Symbol) appearing as a three-pronged upward-pointing fork, followed by the numeral of the unit.

A bold arrow pointing horizontally to the right represents the runic symbol worn by officers serving on the staff of a school and training centre, the colour indicating whether the school is under direct supervision of a Group Command or the SA High Command.

A runic symbol appearing like a three-pronged fork pointing to the left represents members of the staff of a medical school or a training centre.

SA members may wear a Tyr-Rune or symbol of loyalty in the form of an upward pointing black arrow on their sleeves. These are especially conferred upon them, after graduation from an SA-Reichsschule (National SA Academy).

SA members in possession of the Nachrichtenschein der SA (Signal Proficiency Certificate) wear a red downward pointing lightning flash on the left lower sleeve.

Cuff stripes are worn by "loyal SA members of old standing," one or two stripes, either 4 mm. or 12 mm. wide, indicating various degrees of SA membership or active service in the Party or its formations during the period of struggle prior to 1933.

SA men belonging to units upon which honorary names have been conferred, wear a black armlet (3 cm. wide) above the left cuff. On the armlet appears the name of the unit in Gothic letters (grey inscription) e.g., "Horst Wessel."

Introductory Note to the Order of Battle of the SA
(EDS Amendment to EDS/G/1, of 29 Jan 45)

REORGANISATION OF THE SA

The trend towards making German administrative regions correspond to Party Gaue is parallel to the trend towards equating the territories of Party Formations and Affiliated Organisations with Party Regions.

During the first part of 1944 a reorganisation took place in the SA; at first the SA-Standarten were made to correspond to NSDAP Kreise. In July, 1944, M. BORMANN (Chief of Staff of the Party Chancellery) and SCHEPMANN (Chief of Staff of the SA) agreed to make the territories of the SA Gruppen correspond with the boundaries of the Party Gaue, but a decision was reached not to form new SA-Gruppen until the end of the war. (This would be necessary owing to the discrepancy between the number of Gaue and Gruppen). Until then the regions of some SA-Gruppen will have to cover several Gaue. However, measures were taken to ensure that each Gauleiter would have a higher SA-Führer at his disposal to whom he could turn in questions affecting the employment of the SA members in the Gau. This new move was virtually a development of existing policy. The "Organisationsbuch" of the NSDAP for 1943 has a chapter on the "Zusammenarbeit zwischen Politischen Leiter und SA, SS, NSKK, HJ und Parteirichtern, ferner NSFK, Reichsarbeitsdienst und Staat". According to this directive, Gauleiter and Kreisleiter held a meeting at least once a month at which the local formations ("in ihrem Amtsbereich zuständige Parteigliederungen") were represented. This cannot be taken to imply that the formations were at this date organised exactly on the same territorial basis as the Party but it does indicate a very close connection. Thus, the further developments are a logical conclusion of this existing state of affairs.

Under the latest organisation, an SA-Gruppe corresponds exactly to one or more Party Gau(e) but never to any part of a Gau, and an SA Standarte corresponds in the same manner to one or more Kreis(e) but never to part of a Kreis. Thus, a far-reaching reorganisation of the boundaries of the territorial commands must have been effected, and, while we are not in possession of complete details, it can be confidently stated that this reorganisation has taken place. Therefore, the published EDS/MIRS Order of Battle, Annexe A of EDS/G/1 should now be used with great caution as the Standarten, while mainly correct within themselves, have now been re-shuffled within the different Gruppen.

One example, however, has come to hand - that of the SA Gruppe OBERRHEIN. The information on this Gruppe is complete in every detail, up to September 1944, and the attached pages will therefore serve as an example of the latest SA organisation as well as a basis for amendments. Original entries (or omissions) relating to Gruppe OBERRHEIN occur (passim) on pages A28, A50, A53, A54, A68-73, A77, A81, A89, A92, A93 and A95.

Apart from some translations, the information has been reproduced as given in the source, and is not intended to conform with the rest of Annexe A.

An effort will be made to revise the whole SA Order of Battle as quickly as possible, subject to an adequate flow of information.

ANNEXE A.

(Order of Battle Tables)

KEY:

PART ONE: SA GRUPPEN.

Part one of the following tables provides one or two separate pages for each SA-Gruppe, and includes the SA Befehlsstelle BOEHMEN u. MAEHREN.

1. "TERRITORY": Under the headings a, b and c are given:-

   a. a definition of the Group Command region in terms of Wehrkreise (Wehrmacht Corps Areas or Military Districts) and their military sub-districts.

   b. a definition of the Group Command region in terms of German Verwaltungsgebiete (governmental administrative territories such as Länder, Regierungsbezirke, Stadt - and Landkreise).

   c. a definition of the Group Command region in terms of NSDAP-Gaue (Nazi Party Districts).

2. "COMMAND": Under the Führer (Commander), Stellvertretender Führer (Deputy Commander), Stabsfuhrer (CoS), Gruppen-Reiterführer (Group Command Cavalry Commander) or his deputy are listed as far as these could be determined. It is quite possible that a considerable number of changes in commands and postings have taken place as the material upon which the compilation of these personalities is based dates from 1942 to 1944.

3. Question Marks: A question mark in front of a unit numeral indicates that the existence of the unit could not be confirmed beyond reasonable doubt.

A question mark inside the parentheses giving the HQ location, indicates that such a HQ location is uncertain and merely believed to be correct.

A question mark following the brackets giving the HQ location, indicates that it is uncertain whether the HQ of the unit is located in the listed town or city or whether it is merely believed to be in the region of such an urban settlement.

PART TWO: SA BRIGADEN.

The second part of the tables lists SA-Brigaden.

1. "HQ LOCATION": Under HQ location S (for Standort or HQ location) indicates that the HQ location is confirmed by such indubitable proof as e.g. German telephone directories or that repeatedly appearing German press references permit the conclusion that headquarters are established at the listed town.

R (for region) indicates that the headquarters may not necessarily be located at the listed town but are certain to be located in the immediate vicinity or region surrounding it.

2. "REMARKS": Honorary names of units are listed under REMARKS in quotation marks.

PART THREE: SA STANDARTEN

The third part of the tables lists SA-Standarten and makes use of the same indications explained in connection with parts one and two. (SA-Gruppen, SA-Brigaden).

Under "COMPONENT OF" are shown the SA-Gruppe to which a Standarte belongs and as far as possible also the Brigade of which it is known to be a component.

Note: For all abbreviations see text and abbreviations list.

PART TWO
SA-BRIGADEN (Brigades)

Standarten (regiments) appearing as components of listed Brigaden, have definitely been identified as such. In no case were these regiments assumed to be part of the higher units, simply because they are known to be situated in towns which territorially would come under the control of identified Brigaden. This precaution has been taken, as it is believed that some Standarten are likely to be under direct control of SA-Gruppen, rather than under the immediate command of Brigaden, somewhat in the manner of Corps or GHQ troops in the case of the German Armed Forces.
(See Page A1 for Key).

PART THREE

SA FUSS-STANDARTEN (Foot Regiments)

The following are the regular SA unit of regimental level (Standarten). Included are those styled Schützen-Standarten (Sharpshooter Regiments) the term being merely a special distinction conferred by HITLER to some foot regiments. (They are designated e.g. S2 while a regular SA Fuss-Standarte of the same number appears simply as 2.)

Excluded are Jäger-Standarten ("Hunters' Rifle Regiments"), Gebirgsjäger- (Mountain Chasseurs), Gebirgsschützen- (Alpine Sharpshooters), Reiter- (Cavalry), Pionier- (Engineer) and Marine- (Naval) Standarten. These are separately listed, following the Fuss-Standarten.

The following Reiter-Standarten have not been identified but are most likely in existence. As each SA Brigade has generally at least one Reiter-Standarte which bears its number, the following such cavalry regiments may be assumed. The Standorte (HQ locations) given in brackets are those of the brigades to which the assumed units would belong. While brigade headquarters and those of component cavalry regiments are not always located in the same town, this is generally the rule. In those cases where the brigadeheadquarters and the headquarters of the cavalry unit are not in the identical town, the latter are always situated in a nearby community.
(Excluded from this list were brigades of which the composition is definitely established and known not to contain a cavalry unit owing to exceptional local circumstances as e.g., in the case of Mountain Brigades.)

NO:	ASSUMED HEADQUARTERS:	SA GRUPPE:	REMARKS:
?7	(Köslin)	Pommern
10	(Stettin)	Pommern
24	(Kottbus)	Oder
27	(Berlin)	Berl.-Brbg	As Reiter-Standarte 28 (Berlin-Britz) of Brigade 28 (Berlin) is confirmed, it appears possible that the remaining Berlin brigades, namely 27, 29, and 30, need not necessarily all include a cavalry unit.
29	(Berlin-Ost)	Berl.-Brbg
30	(Berlin)	Berl.-Brbg
38	(Halle/Saale)	Sachsen
40	(Altmark Region)	Elbe
75	(Düsseldorf)	Niederrhein
76	(Aachen)	Niederrhein
103	(Mähr, Schönberg)	Sudeten
105	(Bromberg)	Weichsel
107	(Stolp)	Pommern
133	(Bautzen)	Sachsen
145	(Bromberg)	Weichsel
146	(Thorn)	Weichsel

153	(Heidelberg)	Kurpfalz
163	(Oldenburg)	Nordsee
217	(Kattowitz)	Schlesien
250	(Metz)	Kurpfalz

The brigades Elsass-Süd, Elsass-Nord, Posen, and Litzmannstadt are also likely to include at least one Reiter-Standarte each of which may bear either the names of these brigades or their numbers which, however, have not been identified. This assumption may be especially justified as horse-breeding in both the Upper and Lower Alsace as well as in the Polish plains is on a high level. As for Litzmannstadt, SA cavalry activities are frequently reported from all parts of Poland in connection with actions against partisans.

ANNEXE E:

WHO'S WHO IN THE SA

Page

Key E1

Abbreviations used in the WHO'S WHO E2

WHO'S WHO E4

This Annexe should be inserted in the publication E.D.S./G/1, and the Table of contents amended accordingly

E.D.S./G/1
Compiled by MIRS (LONDON Branch)
From Material Available at WASHINGTON and LONDON

KEY

1. The attempt has been made to list in alphabetical order all identified personalities holding officer's, especially senior officer's rank, in the SA. The list cannot be regarded as complete.

2. Ranks held and posts filled are not always certain beyond any doubt and two persons may be found entered as holding the identical post or command.

This is partly due to undated source material and partly due to the fact that transfers as well as promotions are frequent and information on them is not always available.

Reference should be made for commanders etc. of units to the Order of Battle in Annexe A, which will in some cases conflict with information in the WHO'S WHO.

3. German titles, ranks and designations have been retained in most cases. Only in some cases could an approximate translated version be given. Any attempt to translate all German terms would have resulted in misinterpretation.

Reference should be made for translations, to standard publications, including the EDS/G series, and the EDS CI Handbook for Germany, which contains an abbreviations glossary.

4. Dates shown in parentheses indicate the date of source material, when the latter was available.

Following rank designations, dates indicate time of promotion, or award of seniority.

5. A list of abbreviations used in the WHO'S WHO is given for convenience in this Annexe. It partly overlaps, and partly supplements the abbreviations list in Annexe B.

6. For purposes of alphabetical listing, the normal German usage has been followed, of treating the modified vowels ä, ö ü as though spelt ae, oe, ue: for example ä immediately precedes af.
